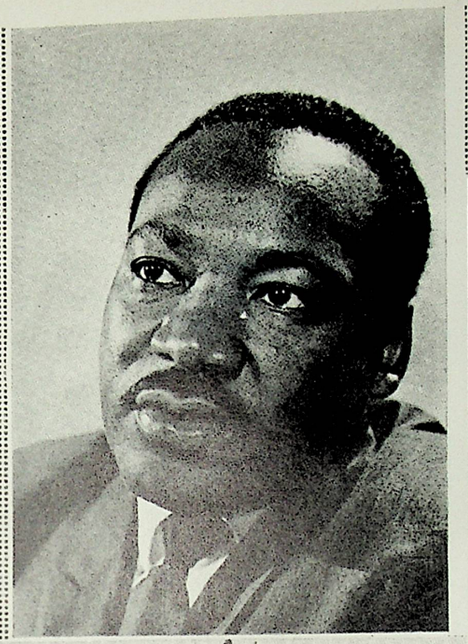
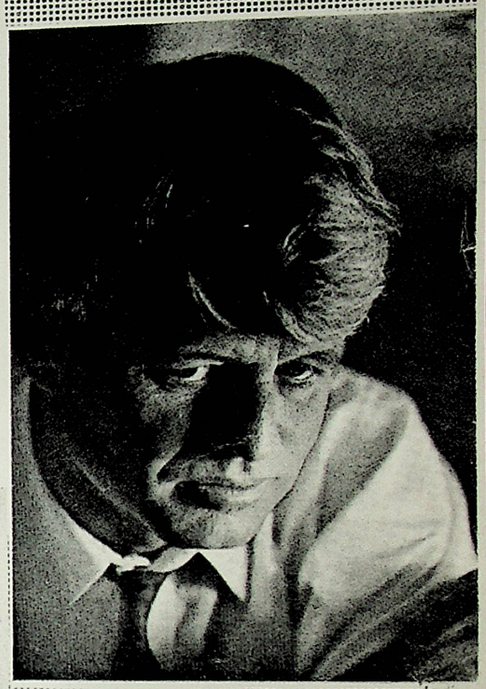
THE STRATFORD WAY 1968-69

2007.16.3





DEDICATION

This edition of the Stratford Junior High School Yearbook is dedicated to the future of Mankind. May we, in our time, see the day arrive when all prejudice will be overcome, when wars will be unknown, and when Mankind will reach new heights in co-operative living.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

A yearbook is a record of action and growth of boys and girls over the past year. In years to come it serves as a treasured memory of happy school days. During our school years, we accomplish, see changes in our minds and bodies and begin the role of citizenship which we are to play in life. Young people have an increasing sense of urgency during the teen years. They look to the future with some trepidation but with the courage and enthusiasm of youth. Training for living is continuous from birth through early childhood, through the school years, and throughout adult life.

Knowledge is increasing at an ever accelerating rate reputedly doubling every ten to fifteen years. Students in Junior High School have caught up the accumulated knowledge of many centuries. Much still remains. Descarte deduced the laws of calculus prior to 1640. The writings of great authors and the compositions of many musicians are unknown to us. The ever increasing scientific developments shriek to be heard. Learning requires overtime. Let us begin now. The future of tomorrow depends on the midnight oil of today.

A.K. Brimacombe

STUDENT COUNCIL'S MESSAGE

The past three years at Stratford have given me many fond memories. It seems only a short time ago that we first came through the doors of Stratford. Our knees were shaking and our teeth were chattering. We were afraid, yet excited, by the new experience before us. But time has swiftly flown. We find ourselves, once again, at a new threshold. We, the Seniors, are going on to become Juniors again. We can look back over the past years and see all the good times we have had—especially the dances, bands, and Muk-Luk! We shall always remember those happy days.

We shall all leave Stratford with mixed emotions. We are looking forward with eager anticipation to see what the future holds in store for us. But, we shall always look back with nostalgia; and a reluctance to leave so many good friends and memories.

It has been a great honour serving you as your president during this past term. I have gained a sense of responsibility from this experience and I hope my succesors will be as rewarded as I was.

I know that the students we leave behind us soon will be following in our footsteps. They too will cherish the memories of their Stratford school days. We know you will keep the traditions of Stratford alive. To the teaching staff, we can hardly find the words to express our gratitude. The gift of knowledge is one which we will carry with us always. This gift will be the key that opens many new doors for us. Thank-you for giving us this key.

So, farewell to Stratford, to our many friends, and to this part of our lives that we sadly leave behind.

Adieu,

Deb Ward.

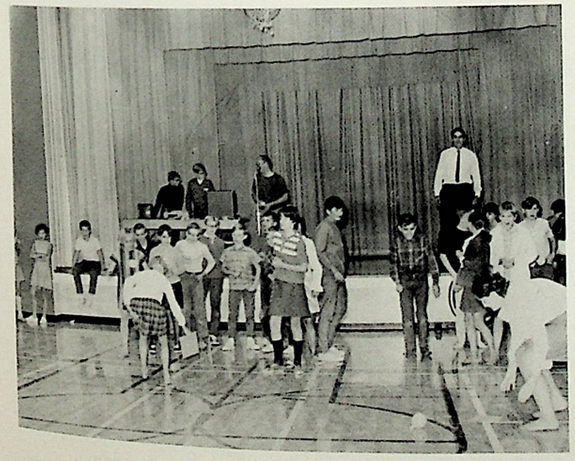
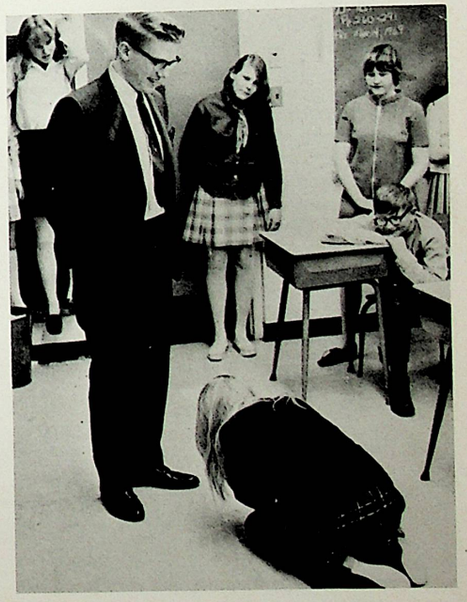
The way it is in grades 7 and 8.



This is more fun than Mathematics.



I'll never do it again.

SENIOR CLASS PROPHECY

The purpose of the class prophecies in the pages that follow is not to humiliate or "poke fun" at any individual or institution. Rather the intent is to provide some fun in an attempt to prophesy what an individual could become. In order to accomplish this goal your reporters have provided you with true situations. The names of the participants are fictional, and any resemblance to a person, past, present or future, is entirely accidental.

9A

Bruce Crowther, the Guru, unwillingly opened his eyes to the demoralizing scene. His home, normally a place of peace and tranquility had been invaded by an assortment of various personalities, all reminiscing their experiences as members of the 1968-1969, 9A class.

Lying prostrate on the floor were Leslie Legg, a professional wrestler, and Bertha Sticksma, star linebacker of the Los Angeles Rams. Attending to their wounds which had resulted from a demonstration of their respective talents was Diane Lazaruk, lady with the lamp. In a corner of the room were Dave Frey, basketball inflator, Larry Hancharuk, basketball deflator and Carol Clark, gossip columnist for the Ponoka Post. William Zwozdesky, a Greek Orthodox - Roman Catholic - Buddhist Monk and Debbie Knight, the Monkess, entered and immediately became involved in an argument with the now frustrated Guru. Don Tatar, comedian, was relating several jokes to the local wino, Robert Steinborn, although Robert wasn't paying attention. Lorraine Parry was demonstrating several swimming strokes to Danny Small, percussionist of the Vegreville Kazoo Orchestra. Wine taster Gerald Mohorich was at the bar helping unsuccessful electrician Dave Korzan drown his sorrows.

Meanwhile, in the kitchen, gourmet chef Harold Mayer was bending over a pot of Hungarian Sauerkraut. Debbie Staples, an anaesthetics expert, wielding a club, used Martin Bohm, professional loser, as a dummy. Watching the demonstration were Terry Fleck, an amateur professional and Wayne Karlen, a professional amateur. Dishonest Darla McKay, well known car dealer, was earnestly attempting to get Debbie Popowich, head coach of the Wetaskiwin Winners track team, to buy a used dune buggy.

Back in the living room, Dean Eilertson leaned over and asked the Guru the name of his bathroom architect, while Mark Annett, aspiring middle-aged hippie, pleaded with Barb Burnett not to use her handbag other than in selfdefence. The Guru's butler nodded in agreement as he staggered out of the room.

The evening was not without entertainment. Joanne Bruce, boa constrictor trainer, displayed her agility, Jane Gavriloff gave an impromptu ballet lesson and Arleen Ousman proceeded to chop up her feet in a highland sword dance. These frolics were interrupted by 10 minutes of silence in remembrance of photographer Scott Fraser who had died of overexposure.

The evenings festivities ended when the Guru, with Robbie Norris supplying background music on his sitar, placed everyone in a trance. Knowing they were oblivious to everything, the Guru had the pleasure of throwing them all out on their heads.

Today, Friday 28, 1985, Miss Maryian Spilar is having a class reunion at her horse and cattle ranch in Tuscon, Arizona. While she is busy with the preparations, her foreman, Gordon Spooner, is welcoming the guests.

The guests of honour arrived yesterday. They are Mr. and Mrs. Gustavson. Mr. Gustavson is still teaching Drama at Stratford, however, Mrs. Gustavson, alias Miss Anderson, has retired. They are happy to announce that in a few days Mrs. Gustavson is expecting triplets. Jim Miller and Linda Semeniuk, the famious obstetricians, are standing by in case of emergency. The birth of the babies will be filmed by Georgia Fedynak's Television Company, S.E.X., in Technicolour. Meridel Seale, well known interior decorator, and Calvin Robins are working on props and sets for the film. Brenda Coulton, now a Social Worker, is lending a hand.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch's swimming pool, Cathy Grose, 1982 Olympic Free Style swimmer, is trying to break her own record of one half second. By the side of the pool, unknown comedian Vaughn Daily is pouring suntan lotion on the back of his secretary, Barb Jones. Ronald Byers, the life guard is watching Robert Wahl, Game Management Agent, and psychiatrist Leonard Whitfield trying to drown each other. Paul Stevens, a football player is trying to impress dancing school director Elizabeth Holtorf by flexing his muscles. John Lunan, a ski instrucor, is sitting under a cherry tree, reading the latest risque pocket novel. Barbara Bissel, who manages a home for wayward girls, her husband, Gerald Read, and their ten children are trying unsuccessfully to play tennis.

In the afternoon New York lawyer Steve Holmes, official Santa Claus Alan Rhodes and mathematician Gerry Bulmer saddled some horses and went of a scouting trip. Fortunately they did not return.

In the evening, everyone was gathered around the T.V. set in the ranch house lounge watching astronaut Dawn Ringrose walk in space. Dave Wharton, an international playboy and Tom Tillotson, a ventriloquist, were dancing on the bar after sampling its contents. Everyone sat tensely in their chairs, trying to ignore Dave's and Tom's singing. Dennis Drongal, an ex-priest, was praying ernestly for Dawn's safe return from space.

It was indeed a very exciting day for the guests. Even though some had grown rich and some poor, some fat and lazy, they were still the same old, fun loving 9B class.

It was nine o'clock in the morning of July 1, 1999, as I walked serenely down a dark, forlorn street, enjoying the clean air of one of Edmonton's rare unpolluted areas, when I bumped almost nose to nose into one of my old school colleagues, Darwin Markowski, a very popular funeral director. We stopped and talked for some time about the good and the bad times we experienced many years ago in Stratford Jr. High. We wondered what became of our other school chums in the 9C class, such as wealthy playboy, David Martens, and his wife, Joyce Veltman, the latest singing sensation. We also brought up the subject of Larry Bolt and his escape from a mental hospital to which he was committet after trapping Irene Horrocks and Joanne Babiak in an elevator near the top of a hundred storey building.

Before long, we separated and I was on my way, when suddenly I heard a rapid burst of gunfire coming from an alleyway. It was a gun battle between two hoodlums (Erwin Rebke and Donald Marner) and Lavonne Roloff's famous Women Police Force. Caught in the middle were Barb Fulford and Pat Eby carrying signs of protest against violence. A short distance away the well-known "cop", Jack Deenik, was trying to settle a dispute between the mechanic, Donna Fehr, and a middle-aged hippie named Pat Price.

Sitting down on a bench, I turned on my radio and heard the popular disc jockey, Dak Kerr, playing the hits of the day. Picking up an abandoned copy of yesterday's newspaper, I recognized a picture of the well-known international spy, Kathy Spratt, who is being held in custody for some major crime. After reading Ingrid Huget's gossip column, I turned to the sports section. I discovered there was to be a bout tonight between the two lady wrestlers, Patti Campbell and Marlene Thorlakson, refereed by Valerie Nykolaychuk. In the entertainment section, I found out that Laura Stordal was playing a star role in the hit called "The Ugly Duckling."

As I laid down the paper, a car whizzed by containing the model, Charlene Bargen and her friend Anita Lutz, who had been left unattended on an operating table during her last operation.

After walking on, I noticed a crowd assembled in front of the University. I recognized Professor Bradley Edwardth walking along a ledge while his faithful wife, Karen Vipond pleaded for him to come down. (So the old boy has finally cracked!) Looking around me, I noticed Darryl Currie, winner of the Stockholm Tricycle Championship, and his wife, Pat Peterson, a beauty expert.

In a little while I was on my way again. As I passed Gordon Hoffman's nudist colony, Robert McCaskill and Margaret Mason waved at me over the top of the brick wall.

Suddenly, a sad memory struck me. I remembered the late Mrs. Ross who was carried away in a U.F.O., pursued by the famous jet pilot, Kathie Thomas.

Len Nelson.

9D

It was at the 9D class reunion of 1979, that Mr. Funk, now a pool shark, found out what had happened to his students of ten years ago.

Daniel Chatterly and Billy Hupp have become the joint owners of a once prosperous barber shop and beauty parlor. Wendy Harder has become the owner of Edmonton's largest dog kennel. The three scientists, Sylvia Nelson, Joyce Kashman, and Karen Charter, are now transplanting human vocal cords into chimpanzees. Anne Wood and Janet Steele are now two new Leonardo de Vinci's.

Kathy Lemon has become a centre for the Los Angeles Rams. She is demonstrating her tackling ability to Ray Getzinger, a popular matchmaker, while Mr. Funk looks on.

Cheryl Sikstrom is now writing script for that popular T.V. show "Laugh In", while Donna Elder is writing and illustrating her own Romance Stories. Terry Tokarek and Wayne Armstrong are full time park clutterers. Kelly MacAvoy and Brenda Arndt are professional bench warmers for their basketball teams. Rick Metcalfe is starting his own line of paperboys with Heidi Marcinkowski as his photographer. Rolf Adolph, of course, has become the Dean of Mathematics at the University of Alberta. Robert Zelensky and Susan Inscho have started their own line of Sleep-Eze mattresses. That's what happens when you sleep in Mrs. Tesan's classes! Rod Bruce is now the head cook for multi-millionaire Bruce Stebbings. Tom Langeste has finally realized his ambition. He has become a pilot --for a group of Cuban hyjackers. Debbie Neufeld is designing her own clothes.

Last, but not least, Perry Whan and Rod Warwick have become successful candy dealers, specializing in Mo Jos.

Mr. Funk, now 70 years of age, can not overcome his surprise. His hard work and effort in 1969 have finally paid off. Just look at the fine citizens that were once his 9D class!

Karen Charter

9E

The date is January 15, 1979 and the place is Suffery Hospital. Rangers Cuff, Davidge and Marshall have just rescued Mr. Gustavson from a serious tobogganing accident in which his back was severely injured. Dr. Wasylyk and Nurses Schoen, Newitt and Ellams are preparing for immediate surgery on their former grade nine teacher.

Hours later, young men and women began to gather in the hospital lobby to visit their grade nine teacher of ten years ago. The first to waltz in was Erwin Holff accompanied by his wife, the former Judy Litwin. They had just returned from their Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. In the corner stood John Saunders and Mark Reynolds, two of the world's multi-millionaires, smoking twelve inch stogies. Lionel Brown, now a sunday school teacher at one of the local churches came in with Father Olauson. Garry Ollis, international playboy and his bunny companion, Leanne Reibetanz, hopped in. Ken Kenton, master thief for W.A.X.Z.E., sneaked in through the side door.

Geoff Frisby, employed as a pickup and delivery man for "Stork's Diaper Service" strode in, rolling a toothpick around his mouth. Brenda Waldie, a top ballerina for the Montreal Ballet Company, tripped over Geoff's size thirteen shoes as she entered.

Standing in a group were Muriel Biggs, internationally known beautician and her husband-to-be, Clint Webber, the world's heavy weight boxing champion. They were talking excitedly to Cathie Austen and Debbie Lokin, the famous stars of the Ban deoderant commercials.

Richard Ruttan, a salesman for Playtex Co., entered and started to sell his merchandise when Jim Chester, a law enforcement officer, arrested him for peddling without a licence. Loy Luke came in, arm in arm with his two beautiful secretaries, Judy Muirhead and Cathie Stibbard. They were followed by Jacob Oussoren, the successful butcher, wearing his blood stained, flowered apron. The surprise of the evening was Paul Gemmel (Mr. Universe 1978), who strode in wearing his Mr. Universe suit.

Now to the sad part of this story. While everyone is having a good time, Mr. Gustavson is forgotten and alone, except for Miss Anderson, now Mrs. Gustavson.

Here we are , gathered in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Boyd (Joyce Stepaniuk always was lucky!). Robert and Joyce are the happy parents of five bouncing boys. Seated near them is Larry Bjornerud, who is poverty stricken, but very, very happy as long as he has his bottle.

I see Teddie Anderson, our ex-cigarette girl, talking to Jeff Biggs, who is wearing his hero medal that he won at Stratford when he was only fourteen. They are admiring Linda Elton who is an absolutely great grapefruit dieter. You should see those grapefruit disappear! Standing in a corner, discussing the wounds they received in a recent riot, are our faithful women "cops", Doreen Neigel, Charlotte Foley and Yvonne Buffalo. Jane Hallberg's left arm is in a cast. She tripped over some residue in the barn and broke it. Stanley Gill is trying to give her Artificial Resuscitation, at which he excels.

A large group of people are standing in the center of the room, telling each other about their lives. Barb Gouchee and Renita Bransma now own the Hi Style Hair Salon. Wendy Hamilton and Debbie Smith, the ex-acrobat, now walk dogs for $2.50 an hour. Gary Dasko, the happy father of ten, is now the proud grampa of twins. Doug Glowicki still body paints, but it is dying profession.

I am told that Paul Gow is in the Hospital, suffering from cuts and abrasions caused by a fall off a fence during regimental training. Although Robert Van Dolder is bald, he still tests diapers for softness. Noreen Ellis has become a bed salesgirl! Mary McMullen quit dress designing and became a nanny. Dennis Elliot is a swinging disc jockey with CFCW. Brent Braidwood is still doing movies for his loyal fans. Much of Brent's success is due to his manager, Lionel Thompson. Lance Guse, our man about town, has left us ,but Darrel Tomiak, the handyman is still here.

Flash: Nancy Spratt is still a professional grade nine student. She is being tutored by Mr. Chrapko, the "Yardstick General", to whom we owe many thanks for putting up with us during the 1968-1969 school term.

It is 3 p.m., June 30, 1989 as a group of people come up to Don Lind's home for a class reunion. His wife, Evelyn Gervais, welcomes them into the living room where we find Don, the captain of the beer drinking team standing beside a keg. He is talking to Cal Mahar, expert car driver, and his wife, Cathy Webb, who have just returned from a world cruise. We can hear the voices of Ron Wytyshyn, world famous chef, and Randy Drysdale, expert pizza flipper, arguing in the kitchen about whether it is more correct to serve wine or beer with pizza.

As I peek through the half open bedroom door, I see Allen Elliot watching Donald Duck on Colour T.V. Sitting on the chesterfield in the living room are Phyllis Javorsky, Linda Tokarek, and Hettie Sieswerda from the secretarial pool of the J.T.&S. Lemonade Stand Company. They are discussing that master of architecture, who designs lemonade stands, Terry Nasipayko. Dan Zmurko and Larry Hay, police officers first grade, are in a dark corner, where they are discussing their arrest of the "mad plumber", Darryl Stenbach, in a raid on his basement apartment. In the raid, they discovered kidnapped sports caster Vern Shelby. Kim Belcourt and I, Glen Harper, are standing in the doorway, surveying the people and discussing "his" moon and "my" beach (people often call me a beach bum!).

Nora Crew is telling of her fabulous travels to the United States to foreign correspondent Deb Ward, who has been everywhere except Canada. Dagmar Tauderer, sitting in a corner, grumbles to herself on the drudgeries of home-making.

As I start to leave, Alida Blitz and Roseanne Gregor, successful hair dressers, come in and I close the door on my way out of this den of merry-makers.

9H

Good evening, ladies and gentlemen, this is Walter Krankheit at the 9H class reunion in beautiful downtown Burbank. A testimonial dinner is being held in honour of Mrs. Tessari, a teacher who is finally being replaced by a computer. It is a $100 a plate dinner with the proceeds going to the "Save Tessari Fund".

It has been thirty years since 9H was last together. - Ah! Here come the first guests. I recognize Brenda Knight, a painter who paints two storey houses without a ladder, She is followed by Val Simons, an escaped criminal convicted of leading a moose stampede through a parking lot out of season.

Now coming through the door are two famous authors: Wendy Woods, known for "Wendy the Pooh" and"How To Succeed In Forestry"; and David St. Dennis, a Volkswagen tester, known for his book "How to lose weight in 9,999 ways". Following them are Pat Poon, a professor of English, and Debbie Shaw, a Playboy bunny. Good grief!! - Here comes Marlene Elisher, presently Mrs. Hugh Hefner XI. A drunken bum is following her. No, its just Earl Johnson, number one tester for Labatt's Breweries. Earl is followed by David Niven, owner of a Polish butcher shop.

Next, I see Len Tober, president of Todds Babyfood Company, walking with two rivals: Dixie Schneider and Dianne Luciuk, manufacturers of ladies undergarments.

Here come the Steele brothers. Tim is wanted for shop lifting and Peter is a steel sampler. They are followed by Bonnie Wurtz, wife of big-time gangster Clyde.

Entering is the sponsor of the dinner, Garry Hinton, president of Hin - Ton Chinese Foods, with his chief cook and bottle washer, Richard Poon. Richard tells me that Evan Lowig could not attend due to business commitments. Evan is now the owner of the Lo Wig Company and a part time bishop.

The last to enter are Dianne O'Conner, a professional critic and complainer; Jean Kovacs, Phyllis Diller's hair dresser; Anna Berge, a nannie, and Elaine Mills, owner of the worlds fastest dog teams. And last, but not least, Nate Evans, owner of the Edmonton Burlesque Club, with his private check girl, Linda Jacobson.

What a night this will be! I have been informed by a reliable source that the F.B.I. and the R.C.M.P. will make a combined raid!

This is Walter Krankheit, good night!

9J

This is Doug Swanson, mediocre reporter, covering the 1999 9J class reunion. It is being held at the mansion of the wealthy Darrell Sawchuck. He made his money in the Bootleggers Union of Canada. Darrell has hired the K.P.S. (Krys, Prediger, and Semeniuk) Janitorial Service to clean up after the party. Don Joys, the junior partner in the service, is at the moment keeping busy cleaning out the ashtrays in the room.

Debbie Owchar has just married the famous Dr. Brian Williams. They have recently returned from a visit to Lower Slobovia where they saw the king and queen, known to most of us as Karl Pasowesty and Rae Real. Dave Sadowsky and Joe Fryk, successful rice farmers in Death Valley, are talking to the professional athlete, Richard McDowell. Richard is the star center for the Harlem Globetrotters Midget Team. Garry Morrow, the new Hollywood sex symbol, is trying to fight off his loyal fan, Shirley Kovack. Craig Crossen, Cal Bennett, and Theodore Eskelson, partners of the C.B.E. Playboy Club are talking to their hat-check girl, Esther Karrel. Sitting in a chair in a corner is Gwen Perusini, busily studying her grade nine texts. She hopes to pass this year. Debra Lewin is in the middle of the room walking through the sand ashtrays in her bare feet. Debbie McGregor, the gossip columnist, is talking about the latest scandal.

Everyone is very sorry that Shirley Kobialko could not attend. She was shot down over North Korea and held for ransom. However, Canada insisted that the North Koreans pay us to take her back.

It is getting late. We must leave and let the K.P.S. Janitorial Service earn its wages.
